Photographic prints on canvas that are then stretched and wrapped around a wooden frame are a popular and innovative way of presenting inkjet images. Traditionally, the method of producing canvas wraps involved making a frame and then using stretching and stapling equipment to attach the canvas to the frame. With the new Gallerie wrap system from Ink2image, a canvas wrap can now be made in a matter of minutes with no specialized equipment or training.

The Gallerie wrap system is extremely simple and consists of self-adhesive stretcher bars from 8” to 60” in length, re-usable corner assembly guides, corner pins and braces, a trimmer, and archival glue. The process of making a wrap is very easy – and takes about five minutes on average. Full instructions are included with every Gallerie wrap product. The system is also extremely cost effective – a 16” x 12” wrap costs less than $ 13 including canvas - and compares favorably to traditional and more complicated wrapping methods. System bars are supplied in two ranges - the standard 1¼” depth range from 8” to 24” in length, and in the Pro 1¾” depth range from 8” to 60” in length. All bar lengths within a range are interchangeable so any size format can be made. With the Pro range, center braces are available to prevent bowing on larger wraps over 30” in length.

The system works with most medium to heavy weight canvas media. As canvas wraps are normally displayed without a glass covering, it is recommended that the print is coated to protect from damage, and Ink2image provides our world renowned Print Guard spray and roll on coatings for this purpose. Print Guard is supplied in 400 ml aerosols or in bulk bottles to provide a virtually invisible, water resistant coating that increases fade resistance by as much as 100% as well as protecting against scratches, finger prints and common house hold cleaning agents.

Ordering the Gallery wrap system components is very simple. Firstly, decide on which depth of stretcher bars you want to use - the Standard 1¼” deep range, or the Pro 1¾” deep range. A corner kit is then needed for the chosen range. This contains the re-usable corner assembly guides, a trimmer, and enough archival glue for dozens of wraps. Then, order the stretcher bars in the required lengths. The standard bars come in packs of two or twenty, and the Pro bars in packs of two or eight. All bar packs contain the required corner pins and corner braces. For Pro bar images over 30” in length, center braces should also be ordered singly, or in packs of four. As an example, to produce ten 16” x 12” standard depth wraps, then a standard corner kit, a pack of 20 x 16” standard bars, and a pack of 20 x 12” standard bars would be needed.
